The Honorable Robert Lighthizer United States Trade Representative 600 17th Street NW Washington, DC 20003 The Honorable Sonny Perdue Secretary U.S. Department of Agriculture 1400 Independence Ave., S.W. Washington, DC 20250

Dear Ambassador Lighthizer and Secretary Perdue:

The United States has an immediate opportunity to achieve another item on the U.S. trade agenda and negotiate a strong trade deal with Japan that brings significant benefits to the dairy industry. With the recent conclusion of Japan's national elections, the next several months will be critical and on behalf of America's dairy industry, we urge the USTR to move quickly to secure an agreement that builds upon the best dairy components of the CPTPP and Japan-EU agreements. Without that, our industry stands to lose $1.3 billion in exports over a decade, costing dairy farmers $1.7 billion in farm income.

Given that Japan is an established market with a growing demand for dairy products, the successful negotiation of a robust trade agreement with Japan will bring a much-needed boost to the economic health of the U.S. dairy industry and set our industry up on a path to compete effectively there moving forward. Securing robust dairy export opportunities with this overseas market will be critical to restoring confidence for our dairy farmers and processors across the country.

With per-capita consumption of dairy products in Japan increasing at four percent a year and domestic production unable to keep pace, the U.S. dairy industry stands ready to meet this demand with high-quality U.S. products. The U.S. exported $270 million in dairy products to Japan in 2018, making it our fifth largest overseas market with room for further growth. For instance, with a level playing field, the U.S. could roughly triple our cheese exports to that market over a decade¹. That's particularly important because Japan is the second largest net importer of cheese in the world, importing nearly $1.3 billion in cheese in 2018.

Unfortunately, right now a level playing field isn't what we have. Instead, our largest export competitors have preferential trade deals with Japan while the U.S. does not, putting our industry at a significant disadvantage. The Japan-EU agreement and the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP) have allowed the European Union, New Zealand and Australia to position themselves to seize sales from the U.S. dairy industry.

It is clear that increasing our market access in Japan is urgently important to the U.S. dairy industry. That is why we are asking the USTR to act decisively in negotiations with Japan and secure an agreement that builds upon the best components of the Japan-EU agreement and the CPTPP.

Additionally, any negotiated agreement must combat the EU's efforts to monopolize the use of common name products through the misuse of geographical indications. Protecting the use of common names, particularly the use of generic cheese names, is a high priority in order to ensure that U.S. dairy products can continue to be sold unrestricted in markets across the globe. To that end, we urge USTR to build further upon the side letter precedents it so successfully initiated under the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement in order to lock in market access assurances for the export access ultimately secured with Japan.

It is our hope that the U.S. will seize this opportunity presented by the conclusion of Japan's election. We have full confidence that you and your negotiating teams will deliver a trade agreement that secures the type of new market opportunities in Japan that we need to be fully competitive there and brings home robust benefits for America's dairy farmers and processors.
