China Demographic Trends

- China's total population is expected to peak in the early 2030s at around 1.4 billion people before entering a period of decline.
- Despite policy changes to encourage higher birth rates, China's fertility rate continues to decline, falling below the replacement level.
- China is anticipated to experience a significant increase in its elderly population, with projections suggesting that by 2050, the percentage of people over the age of 65 will rise from approximately 12% to over 25%.

China Trade Situation

- The U.S.-China trade relationship remains delicately balanced with both U.S. political parties targeting Chinese global economic influence leading up to the 2024 elections.
- USDEC & NMPF collaborating with Congressional allies to avoid any tariff escalation that would result in retaliation on U.S. dairy exports.
